Members

Because energy and environmental protection affects everyone, in addition to more than 550,000 individual members, CEA's membership represents a broad list of organizations that include farmers, academia, conservation groups, truck drivers, laborers, trades-people, energy producers, manufacturers, small business owners to so much more.

Our members are your friends, your family and your neighbors who are out there every day trying to make a living and contribute to society. They include businesses across the U.S. that not only employ people, grow and raise the food we eat, but produce and sell the goods that all American's use and rely on daily. They represent a cross-section of the U.S. economy, and they care about having access to affordable, reliable energy to meet their business and family budgets.
